Butte County Public Health Welcomes New Director

BUTTE COUNTY, Calif. – Butte County Public Health staff welcomed their new Director, Danette York to the Department only July 1, 2019. York comes to Butte County with 20 years of Public Health leadership experience and after nearly a decade serving as Director to Lewis County Public Health and Social Services in Washington State. She holds a Master’s in Public Health.

“I am excited to take on this leadership role for Butte County Public Health and look forward working with the dedicated public health team to serve the residents of the county,” said Danette York, Director of Butte County Public Health.

York succeeds former Director Cathy Raevsky who retired on March 1, 2019.

“The Health Department has many opportunities for growth right now, and we need a leader who understands the essential services of Public Health, with a rural focus,” stated Dr. Andy Miller, Butte County Health Officer. “She will have her hands full getting up to speed with Camp Fire recovery operations. Our team is here to support her in all aspects of Public Health in Butte County.”

Mrs. York is a member of the National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO) and specializes in epidemiology and health administration. She received a BA in Organizational Leadership from Northern Kentucky University and her MPH from The Ohio State University.
